Autumn's Tapestry.

In times of old, when war was done,
The battles fought and victory won,
The fairest women in the land,
The artist mind and deftest hand
With loom and shuttle ceaselessly
Adorned the glowing tapestry
With pictures fair, with skill inwrought,
Of battles fierce by heroes fought;
And all the deeds that valor true
Achieved for right rise to the view;
The fabrics rich are hung around
The palaces where kings are crowned.

So after spring has passed away,
With fresh green fields and blossoms gay,
And summer from the land has fled
And left her beauties lying dead,
Then Autumn, glowing Queen, weaves fair
Her tapestry in colors rare;
Spring's "Cloth of gold" and tulip glow,
With Summer's fire of scarlet blow;
And yellow gleam and rosy blush,
All join to shine in radiant flush
In Autumn's weaving hanging high
Against the walls of deep blue sky.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

The steamship Wisconsin, from New York, has arrived at Liverpool.

A child's mutual savings bank, containing two pennies, was among the relics of the Rio railroad disaster.

The Union Coffee and Spice Mills of McLauchlin & Co., Chicago, were burned recently. Loss $75,000, fully insured.

Strikers at the hog abattoir, on Hackensack Meadows, Jersey City, all went back to work yesterday at an increase of wages.

The brewers of Patterson and Newark have joined hands with those of New York and Long Island, forming a combination to maintain the price of beer and put a stop to boycotting and labor unions.

Wm. Stephenson and George Havens, victims of the recent explosion at the Forcite powder works, at Lake Hopatcong, N. J., died on Wednesday, and John Rogers and John Francher are in a precarious condition.

The presence of the blue coats was about the only indication yesterday morning of a strike being in progress at the Chicago packing houses. Hundreds of men went to work and there seemed to be no lack of business at the principal houses.

Tuesday the 9th inst., in Yancey county, a man named Pate was teasing a boy of the same name in the presence of several persons. The boy suddenly flew into a passion, drew a knife and stabbed the man in the breast. The wound proved fatal. The young murderer has been lodged in jail.

A Times' special from Wheeling, West Virginia, says the brakemen on the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad, running from this city to Yellow Creek, Ohio, and thence east and west to Pittsburg and Cleveland, left their trains on the 10th inst. The men refuse to give the reason for their move, but say they will meet the road officials at noon Saturday.

Wilmington Review: The railroad offices of the Atlantic Coast Line that were burned by the disastrous fire of February 21st, on the corner of Front and Red Cross streets, are soon to be rebuilt. The plans are already drawn and adopted. The new building will be of brick, 120 feet long on Front street, and 50 feet deep on Red Cross street. It will be two stories high in the rear, the latter being a basement. The basement will be occupied as storage rooms for the large accumulation of papers, and there will also be lavatories and bath rooms for the accommodation of the offices of the first floor. The building, when completed, will be one of the most imposing structures in the city, and will cost about $200,000.

Salisbury Herald: The school census of district 2, gives 663 whites and 691 colored school children in this district. The census seems to indicate an increase in population of about 140. The population of Salisbury last year was 3,408. It may now be safely set down at about 3,550.——It may not be generally known that our townsman, Mr. J. Douglas Brown, is a leading politician of the fifth ward of New York City. He took an active part in the late municipal contest for mayor, and succeeded in carrying his ward for Hewitt, thereby securing his election.——Dr. John W. Davis and family will leave for China in a few days. He will set sail from San Francisco about the 12th of this month. Dr. Davis is a native of Salisbury, and one of whom we may well be proud. He has labored successfully in the foreign mission work in Soochon for about twelve years. During his visit home he has described their customs in general more minutely than we have heard heretofore.

The evidence in the express robbery case so far as made public goes to prove that the messenger, David T. Fotheringham, was an accessory, or at least a willing victim to the affair. Discrepancies in his statements to the detectives indicate that he knew more of the manner in which the robbery was planned and executed than he would like them to know, and an expert pensman, who was before the grand jury last Saturday, states that the three letters signed "Jim Cummings" were written by one and the same man, and expresses his belief that that man was Fotheringham, and that he wrote them before the commission of the robbery. It now transpires that the messenger's trunk was searched soon after the robbery and a number of sheets of paper were found covered with copies of the signature of W. J. Barrett, manager of the express company. It is supposed that the messenger became able to forge this signature so that he might affix it to the order which the robber presented which allowed him to enter the car. Altogether it looks bad for the messenger.

LIFE IN A CIRCUS TENT.

IT TAKES A BRAINY MAN TO PROPERLY MANAGE A TRAVELING SHOW.

The Employes Lead Good Lives as a Rule and Try to Make Matters Pleasant for Everybody—All of Them Dread Going into Winter Quarters.

From the New York Mail and Express.

To-day is practically the last of the circus season. The managers will make up their profit and loss accounts, calculate the cost of the winter's inaction, strike a balance and ascertain the possibilities for the next tour. The numerous agents will seek some hall show for the winter, and the costumes and paraphernalia of the circus will go to the company's hospital to be rejuvenated and brought out again next March "at an enormous expense." The curiosities, both four and two-footed, will be hired out to the dime museums, while the acres of canvas will be relegated to the shadows of some sailmaker's loft to be patched, strengthened and bound against the opening of the next campaign. The cost of wintering a circus is very great, and has no offset except the little revenue obtained by hiring out the freaks and curiosities. Morris Warner, the well-known journalist of this city, and press agent for Barnum's Greatest Show on Earth, sat sipping a delectable mixture of sugar, milk, ice, etc., over the top of which was sprinkled a quantity of grated nutmeg, last night at the Morton House cafe, when a reporter for the Mail and Express happened in to enjoy a glass of soda. Warner had just come in from Charleston, S. C., and on an eight months' trip, during which time he had travelled 10,447 miles, visited twenty-one States and 144 cities and looked after the interest of an army comprising 520 men and women, 254 horses, fifty-two cars, eighty wagons, fourteen elephants, sixteen camels and eight dromedaries, to say nothing of the other animals.

"I don't know how it was in the days of gladiatorial Rome and Greece," said he, "but if the human nature of those times was the same as the human nature of these times, the amusement of the ancients must have taxed the country to a most appreciable extent. They say the circus days are waning. It can't be. If it were so the armies represented by the tented shows of to-day could not live and grow as they are doing. Have you ever noticed what a great spectacle two regiments will make in a parade? Well, a circus nowadays worthy the name equals it and requires as much administrative and executive talent as an army in the field. In the 'good days' a circus traveled from town to town by vans. After the style of Mrs. Jarley's waxworks. To day it travels by rail in its own cars specially built and adapted for the conveyance of the troupe and the various material parts of the show. There are cars made expressly for the elephants, tigers and other beasts, sleeping cars for the performers, comfortable box-cars for the horses and a kitchen and dining-room cars for the executive staff. Like an army, a circus has a general. He knows every town on a circuit, and speaks of it as a $2,000, $5,000, $10,000 or $20,000 town, as the case may be, meaning, of course, the amount the town is good for to the company's treasury. He knows the people of the town, their likes and dislikes, what days they have the most money and all the other things necessary to follow up an attack to victory. After laying out his route, he sends his skirmishers, generally twenty-four in number, in close succession one after the other to superintend the advertising, arrange hotel accommodations, procure food for the stock and make contracts of various kinds. These agents travel night and day and give checks on the management for expenses incurred. People often marvel at the receipts of a tent show in a single day. They seldom compare with the receipts the items of expense, however. Railroad transportation alone costs from $300 to $500 per day. Advertising eats up over $2,000 per day. Performers' salaries range from $50 to $500 per week, canvas men receive from $30 to $60 per month and board, while the wheelwrights, blacksmiths, barbers, wardrobe women, etc., get from $10 to $20 per week. Add to this the interest on the the first cost of the show, the wear and tear, the expense attending 'the keep' of the stock, agents' salaries and other expenses, and a good-sized hole is knocked in $4,000 every day that a big show is on the road.

"The Signal Service in Washington are not more particular in noting the weather and more eager to calculate to a certainty the probabilities ahead than the circus men. The great aim of a show is to strike fair weather everywhere, and if a circus finds itself following the direction of a storm it will turn aside and exchange dates. When it is cold in the North the show seeks the milder climate of the South and the shekels of the genuine Southerner. Speaking of the South reminds me. The recent trip of the Barnum show was its first visit south of Mason and Dixon's line, and many persons prophesied a failure. It was thought that the Southerner would regard the show as a Yankee organization and give it a wide berth. Just the opposite was the case. There was no show of sectional feeling, and everywhere we were treated with the utmost favor and cordiality. Being a Southerner myself, I was not a little anxious at first as to the result of the trip, but I can truthfully say that during my father's management of Macauley's Theatre in Louisville, Ky., he was never more fairly treated nor more generously supported than was the show from the Nutmeg State, as the Barnum show was called, by the people of the South.

To think that the circus people do not enjoy life is a mistake. There is a special duty assigned each and every man. That done, he is free to follow the bent of his inclinations. Train men can load a car in the dark, the arrangements are so precise. The canvas men touch nothing but the canvas. That raised, they fold their arms and wait until it is time to house it again. Performers work only in the ring. That done, they have nothing more to do until the time comes around for them to enter the ring again. Ball clubs, fishing clubs, social clubs, reading clubs and even debating clubs abound, and altogether many of the members of a circus company have a much more checkered life when the show is in winter quarters than they do when the circus is 'on the road.'"

In Rome nearly all the hod-carriers are women. They are very strong physically, and carry the heavy pans of mortar upon their heads up the ladders seemingly without effort.

CHEEK IN JOURNALISM.

The Man Who Expects Personal Merit to Benefit Him Gets Left Every Time.

From The Atlanta Constitution.

The question is frequently asked: "What is necessary to achieve success in journalism?" The best answer is: "Cheek." Not effrontery or impudence, but just plain, simple, straightforward cheek. Take the representative newspaper men of New York, and you will find they rose from the reportorial rank and file simply because they had assurance as well as talent. The modest journalist who strives to do his duty without pushing himself into notice may get promoted in time, but it is seldom he rises higher than "detail man" at policee headquarters, or possibly "our special correspondent." The light that shines under the bushel dosen't attract as much attention as the light that is set upon the hill. The man who leaves the public to judge of his work, and who does not depend upon personal influence to secure his promotion, will get left every time.

Several years ago there came from up in New England somewhere a tall, lank young man, a journalist by profession. He got a "sit" on the New York Sun, was fortunate enough to get on the right side of Editor Dana and to-day he is a power in the office of that daily. His knowledge of words is something prodigious, and his vocabulary is said to be more extensive than that of any metropolitan litterateur. He it was who coined the expression "hebitudenous crank" and applied it to the editor of the Cleverland, O., Leader. The expression took like wildfire, and has not been approached by anything except, perhaps, the Presidential "innocuous desuetude." The "office cat" emanated from the same fertile brain, and "good Deacon Richard Smith" has cause to lament the hour in which the Yankee scribbler was born.

The story of Richard Smith's acquirement of the adjectival title is rather funny. Mr. Dana was at the Democratic convention in Cincinnati when Hancock was nominated. It was known that Mr Dana had Presidential aspirations, and the good Deacon Richard Smith's paper pitched into Dana without gloves the morning the convention opened. Mr. Smith, on meeting Mr. Dana, hastened to apologise for the utterances of the Commercial, saying that he was not responsible for the article referring to the versatile editor of the Sun, but that it was the work of associates over whom he had not exercised, heretofore, any editorial supervision. On Mr. Dana's return to New York he mentioned this fact to his Yankee factotum, and next day the Sun's editorial on the good deacon Richard Smith set the entire country a laughing.

Apropos of cheek, one of the progressive men in that line was Frank Connelly, of the Sun. He went to an execution in Sussex county, New Jersey, and requested an interview with the prisoner. The jail door was so narrow that Connelly, who weighed close to 300, could not squeeze through, so he urged the sheriff to bring the prisoner out of doors to be interviewed. The obliging official did so, and, standing under the shadow of the gallows where in half an hour he was to die, the murderer answered the questions put to him. Connelly found that the law prohibited spectators at the hanging. He hired a ladder, leaned it against a building adjoining the enclosure in which the execution took place, and took in the scene. He was cheeky, but he was the only reporter of the dozen present who got a reliable account of the hanging, and his cheeky self-assertion secured his promotion.

Bennett, the elder, brought the Herald to success because he was blessed with an equal amount of cheek and energy. Look at Pulitzer and the World. Col. McClure started the Philadelphia Times in 1875 on unlimited cheek and very limited capital; to day the property is worth a mint of money. The illustrations can be carried on ad infinitum.

And by the by, from where do we get the word "cheek?" It is from the French "chic" or a corruption of the Arabian "shiek"—a brave, courageous man? Orthoepists will find this a neat nut to crack. Meanwhile, long life to a man of cheek, the man with too much confidence to be a coward, too much respect for his own opinion to be servile, too much self-assurance to be a sneak, and too much manhood to be snubbed.

Prescription for a Dyspeptic.

General John A. Dix was at one time the unhappy victim of dyspepsia. After seeking in vain for relief, he was at length led to consult the famous Dr. Abernethy. After listening impatiently to his story, Abernethy interrupted him in these words:

"Sir, you are pretty far gone, and the wonder is that you are not gone entirely. If you had consulted common sense, instead of the medical faculty, you would probably have been well years ago. I can say nothing to you excepting this: You must take regular exercise, as much as you can bear without fatigue, as little medicine as possible, of the simplest kind, and this only when absolutely necessary, and a modest quantity of the plain food of the quality of which you find by experience best agrees with you. No man, not even a physician, can prescribe diet for another. 'A stomach is a stomach,' and it is impossible for any one to reason with safety from his own to that of any other person. There are a few general rules which any man of common sense may learn in a week, such as this: That rich food, high seasoning, etc., are injurious. I can say no more to you, sir; you must go and cure yourself."

It is needless to say that General Dix was rewarded by restored health and a good old age.

A Story of Some Walnut Trees.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

There was an amusing case tried here the other day. Some smart fellows from up North were cruising around for timber and happened upon an old, unsophisticated farmer and bought from him forty walnut trees for $5 apiece as they stood. They paid the money and took a bill of sale, and the old man felt rich. When the woman came home he told her what a bonanza he had struck. She was surprised, but was not satisfied, and said it was a Yankee trick. In a few days another fellow came along and offered $10 a tree, and she made the old man sign, and she signed, too. The money was tendered back to the first purchaser, but he refused to take it and sued for the timber. The court held that trees not cut down were part of the realty, and realty could not be sold without the wife's signature; so the sharpers lost their money, too.

SMALL COIN WANTED.

THE WHOLE COUNTRY DEMANDING TEN, FIVE AND ONE-CENT PIECES.

The Mint Working Night and Day—Unable to Supply the Orders that Come in—A Great Scarcity.

From the Philadelphia Times.

All over Philadelphia, in fact all over the country, and even more in the rural parts than in the cities, there is a scarcity of small change—of ten, five and one cent pieces. This scarcity is not because there is less small coin in circulation, but because more is needed for the exigencies of business. There are towns and cities where these small coins are so scarce that people in the retail trade are compelled to use printed tickets and cards—a sort of store order on a small scale. To try to meet this demand the United States Mint in this city is running night and day, and every force not employed in coining silver dollars is concentrated in getting out small coins. Ordinarily the normal demands on the Mint for ten, five and one-cent pieces amount to $10,000 a month.

The scarcity of dimes, five-cent pieces and one-cent pieces was made apparent in July, when the banks began complaining to the Treasury Department at Washington and to the Director of the Mint on the subject. From that time until the present the demands have increased and they have never been so large, so importunate or so urgent as now. Mr. Fox's morning mail is flooded with them, and at every bank, at the Sub-Treasury, the postoffice and even the newspaper offices people are begging for small coins in large quantity and in a way that is unprecedented. When the Treasury Department at Washington felt that it would have to meet the demand without further delay orders were issued to have all the defaced, marred and mutilated small coins at the different Sub-Treasuries sent to the Mint as soon as possible, and tons of old coppers, not to mention the silver, have been sent to the Mint to be melted over and made into new coin. It has been curious, as well as interesting, to see these great heaps of superannuated pennies, decrepit dimes and old nickels that had seen their day and passed through so many hands, finding their way at last to the sheol of all lucre—the melting pot—whence every bright gold piece, no matter how big, must come at last. Thousands of dimes that had made glad the hotel porter and waiter in the shape of fees; nickels that had increased the bootblacks' or newsboys' treasury or perhaps figured as the widows' mite on some charitable errand; and myriads of cents (some of them the regular big, old-fashioned 'coppers" that may have worn the first hole in the smalls boys' first trousers pockets), as well as thousands that found their way into the street car conductor's pouch as the extra one-cent tribute of a long-suffering public to railway plutocrats—all found a common fate. Could all the history of these well-worn and often obliterated coins have been pictured in the vapor that arose from the crucibles in which they were reduced to a molten mass it would have been stranger in its way than the compound of the weired witches' cauldron of Macbeth.

In accordance with instructions from Washington, the Mint has been running day and night during the past six weeks and will continue to do so until the pressure becomes a little easier. Besides all the old material over seventy tons of new material has been used. Not only have the melting and rolling and cutting and whitening and coining departments been operating to their fullest capacity, but Mr. Fox, with great forethought, has had the engraving department doing extra service, as besides accidents there is a limit to the number of impressions given by a die under eighty-ton pressure, and it is a great advantage to have an extra supply of dies on hand. At first the employes of the Mint worked extra hours, but it was found that the strain was too great for human nature to stand, especially in the heated rooms of the Mint. The force has been increased and divided, one-half coming on at 8 o'clock and working until 4 in the afternoon, and the other half coming on at 4 and working until midnight. This it has been found gives the best results. Mr. Fox believes, and it is the belief of the department at Washington, that a man cannot give good, constant service at laborer's work for more than eight hours in a day. Every piece of machinery and every foot of space in the Mint is in use, and it has all the employes in it that it will hold under the system of double shifts in vouge. Every day the small coin is being shipped in wagon loads, as it is bulky, and some single orders, mostly in one-cent pieces, run up as high as $10,000, which is, of course, equal to 1,000,000 cents, and although it is comparatively so insignificant, it is as much trouble and takes as much time to make a cent as to make a $5 gold piece.

HEAVEN.

John D. Witt, D. D.

I cannot tell what are the forms of its material beauty and sublimity. I cannot catalogue the powers with which the redeemed and glorified spirits have been endowed. I cannot describe the engagements in which they are now employed. But we are within the limits of revelation when we affirm and rejoice in the blessed truth that when at last death shall remove us from this world, we shall not only be made perfectly holy, but shall also be admitted to a home; we shall not only be free from sin, but shall enter a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Let us take the comfort, friends, which God so lovingly offers to us. Let us not fail, as we anticipate our future state, to anticipate also the blessedness of our future home. As we think of those who have gone before us, let us not think of them as merely perfect in holiness, but as rejoicing also in material surroundings formed by Him who has made all things beautiful to be the residence of His redeemed.

With a Leopard on Top of Him.

From Sport, in Eastern Bengal News.

I was watching for the leopard in one direction, according to signs from the elephants, when suddenly I saw a great, red thing in the air, it struck me with tremendous force on the back and left shoulder and hurled me to the ground with extreme violence. This was the leopard, whose claws pierced into my flesh. She sat on me for an instant, looked into my face with her great green eyes; I felt her warm breath. She seized me by the left arm, dragged me into a bush, gave me a most pain[illegible]: I shake, and then luckily left me.

NANKI-POO ON HIS TOUR.

The Mikado's Adopted Son Studying Our Manners and Customs.

Prince and Princess Komatsu, of Japan, and suite have arrived in New York. The prince is a very handsome man, with a strikingly intelligent face and a shapely form. The princess is a bright, cheerful-looking little woman of 35 years of age, just six years the junior of her husband. The prince speaks English fairly, but French a good deal better, while the princess knows both languages well. She is very observant, and her inquiring turn of mind leads her to indulge in many adjectives expressive of her delight of all she has seen since her arrival in America.

When the prince was asked about his trip, he said that America was fairly known to his people, because of Minister Bingham's stay of fourteen years among them; he had taught them a great deal about the ways of this country. The prince also spoke very highly of Mr. Bryant, of Washington, who had introduced the American postal system into Japan. General Williams of Indiana, he said, had Americanized their system of finance and his work had improved their hitherto cumbersome system. Americans are in their universities, and as fast as possible Japan was becoming Americanized. They had almost everything to thank the United States for.

The prince was the adopted son of the grandfather of Mutauhito, the present Mikado. During the civil war in Japan between the Tycoon and the Mikado, nineteen years ago, Prince Komatsu was commander-in-chief of the forces of the Mikado, and distinguished himself by his bravery and military skill. The successful termination of the war and ultimate victory of the Mikado were in a measure due to his efforts. When the country had become pacified, the prince made his first visit to Europe, where he studied naval and military science. He is now commander-in-chief of the Imperial Guard, with the rank of lieutenant-general. His forces are composed of 4,000 men in time of peace, or 8,000 men in time of war, and are made up of cavalry, infantry and artillery.

The princess is the first of her rank who has ever been on American or European soil. She looks forward with pleasure to the journey before her and her visit to royalty in other lands. The princess wore on her arrival here a bright colored Scotch wool sacque, blue serge dress, a dark brown ulster and a round drab hat. Her costume later in the afternoon, when receiving, was a blue Chinese broche, satin trimmed, with pompon fringe. Her hair was simply arranged in European fashion, combed back from the forehead and curled behind.

The trip of the party is to be made around the world, and the object in view is pleasure and instruction. After leaving here they will visit Philadelphia, Washington and the Naval Academy at Annapolis; then they will start for England. The military systems of France and Germany will be inquired into, and the return trip will be made via Egypt, Persia and India, thus completing the circuit of the globe. About a year and a half's time will be taken up by the trip. The entire party are dressed in European costume. Accompanying the prince are Yoshitane Sannomiya and his wife, Mme. Yoshitane Sannomiya, mistress of the household of her Highness, or, as her card puts it, "Dame de la Cour de S. A. I. la princess Komatsu." This lady is a native of England, and married her husband when he was traveling in England a dozen years ago. She is a pleasant-faced, motherly looking woman, about 40 years of age. Count Toshiaya Bodjo, officer of artillery, is with the party officially, and Munenbu Date and Count Yaritsuma Arima are traveling with the prince as his companions. These and the servants make up a party of twelve.

Examining an Applicant for a Position in a Georgia School.

The public school system of Georgia is an impoverished institution. It contracts with its teachers for a term of sixty-five days at five cents per day per capita, and settles with them at about sixty-five cents on the dollar. The teacher must accept this or persuade the kind-hearted patrons to pay the remainder. Any one enjoying the ludicrous can spend a healthful half hour at certain of these examinations, especially when the commissioner, as in this case, possesses a natural vein of humor. The applicant was a man of about forty, with a cheap cast of features and a body half as broad as long. He said he didn't claim to know all—wasn't a graduate, &c., but he did know enough to teach them heathen down at Shake Rag, cause he'd teached thar four years, and they didn't know nuthin' yit. The official said he'd ask a few primary questions, and began with:

"What is a letter?"

"A thing crooked sometimes, and sometimes 'taint."

"What is a syllable?"

"Hit's a word split in two."

"How many parts of speech?"

"Three—coarse, fine and superfine."

"What is a verb?"

"Hit's suthin' that tackels onto suthin', or shows that suthin' tackels onto hit."

"What is reading?"

"Hits talking from a book."

"How do you teach reading?"

"Sometimes by coaxin' and sometimes by a board."

"What is geography?"

"Haint no classes in that."

"But you might have. How would you teach it?"

"By askin' 'em questions."

"What are the fundamental rules of arithmetic?"

"Funda what?"

"Fundamental rules."

"Don't know him."

"I had no reference to an individual. I meant the principal rules of arithmetic."

"You mean the way how?"

"Yes."

"Can't jis' remember."

This, of course, is an exceptional subject of ignorance, but the public school teachers in the Georgia backwoods are not proverbial for their very much learning. There are some good schools, however, and this county has two or three of a higher grade. The High School here in Cumming, is presided over by a clever young lawyer—a Georgian and a gentleman of cultivated taste.

Never attempt what is impossible to carry out; but if you have decided that it is possible, then never give up—then death or victory.

A CAVALRY RAID.

AN INCIDENT OF THE WAR TOLD BY AN EX-CONFEDERATE.

A Mixed Affair in Which the Captors Became the Captured Several Times.

Correspondence of the Detroit Free Press.

In August, 1864, when Kilpatrick struck the Atlantic and Macon Railroad at Jonesboro' and other points, I was attached to Armstrong's brigade of Jackson's division of Confederate cavalry. The Federal raider struck Jonesboro' late one afternoon, drove out the militia stationed there in small numbers and applied the torch to four-fifths of the town. Next morning as they came on up to Lovejoy's station, our division, which had been widely scattered the day before, were massed and ready for a fight. Our infantry had been fighting and falling back for an hour when we moved into the fight, two thirds of the command being dismounted to support one of our batteries, and while lying in the ravine just behind the guns were taken in flank by a charge of the Fourth Michigan cavalry. I admit that we were badly rattled at the onset, some of the men breaking for the cover of a wood a few hundred yards away, and being sabred as they ran. A cavalryman rode straight at me with uplifted sabre, and I hauled up my musket to shoot him off his horse. At that time my regiment was armed with rifles, shot-guns, carbines, revolvers, sabres and swords. A few men had carbines and sabres together; all others depended on one weapon alone. Those who had muskets did not have, except in rare instances, sabres; those who had sabres had neither muskets nor revolvers. Not over one company in the regiment was as well equipped as the Federals. I had an infantry musket with bayonet attached, and when I sought to fire on the cavalryman at close range the charge would not explode. Then, as he rode me down, I defended myself with the bayonet, wounding him in the hand and flinging his sabre to the ground. I had the advantage, and he saw it and gracefully surrendered and came down off his horse.

During this time there was fighting all around us. A part of our men used the ravine for a rifle-pit and could not be dislodged, and the cavalry were galloping hither and thither through the smoke. I asked my prisoner what command he belonged to, and he answered, Fourth Michigan. Bullets were zipping about us like angry bees, but I could not take him to the rear for the simple reason that there was no rear. Rebel and Yank were mixed up like beans in a bag as far as I could see. I stood holding him by the arm with one hand, and hanging to his horse with the other, when two Yankee cavalrymen came riding up. My man appealed to them, and as they raised their sabres at me I surrendered as a prisoner of war.

"Watch your chance and run into our lines," said one of the men to my captor, and both rode off at the call of a bugle.

The Yankee now had his saber and my gun, and as his horse became very restive he could give me but little attention.

He asked me what command I belonged to, how the fight seemed to be going, and rather depended on my honesty not to run off. He had just suggested moving along the ravine when a dismounted Johnny, who was dodging about in the smoke, came upon us. He took in the situation at a glance, and inside of a minute Fourth Michigan was again my prisoner. My friend took the saber and mounted the horse and rode away, while I got my musket back.

"You'll probably be recaptured again," I said to the blue-coat as we walked side by side up the ravine.

"Very likely," he replied as he walked on ahead and ducked every two seconds for a bullet.

We had proceeded not over a hundred yards when a crowd of about twenty cavalrymen, nearly evenly divided as to friend and foe, came surging down upon us as they cut and slashed. We were both knocked down in a jiffy, and I got a cut on the head from a horse's hoof which left me unconscious for a quarter of an hour.

When I rallied the fight was over, the Federals having flanked us and passed on. As my captor and prisoner was not found on the ground the conclusion was that he escaped to his own lines. I have always hoped so, for he seemed to be a fairly good fellow.

Business Talent.

From the Chicago Rambler.

The junior partner in one of the most important commission firms has a son, age eight, who is the pride of his father's heart. But nevertheless he believes in giving him an occasional lecture. Last Sunday morning he talked to him on extravagance.

"You spend too much money for a boy of your age, Tom," he said, "and, moreover, you seem to have no idea of the principles of money-getting. I should like to see some evidence of business ability. Now run out and buy me a morning paper."

In about ten minutes the lad returned.

"Well, did you get the paper?" asked his father.

"Oh, yes."

"Then give it to me."

"No, I think I'll keep it."

"What!" cried the father in astonishment. "What do you mean?"

"I think it is a good investment," returned the boy calmly. "I think the price is going up."

"You young scamp, here's a dime. Now give me the paper."

"No; I don't believe I'll take a dime. I've got a corner on the newspaper market of this house, and I propose to force the price up to a quarter before I unload. I guess I know a good 'deal' when I see it."

"My boy," said the proud father, as he fished a quarter out of his pocket, "I was mistaken about your having no business ability. You come down to the office tomorrow, and I'll take you over and introduce you to Mr. Armour. He'll give you a partnership, I know."

Her Social Position.

The Roman woman is thought to have received much training, in the first two centuries, through the great number of secret societies existing. The burial inscriptions show that she bore an important part in these, and even held office in some of the municipalities. Her moral character, at this time, however, did not stand very high, if we may trust the historians and satirists.

Every Year.

The spring has less of brightness
Every year;
And the snow a ghastlier whiteness
Every year;
Nor do summer flowers quicken,
Nor autumn fruitage thicken,
As they once did, for they sicken
Every year.

It is growing darker, colder
Every year;
As the heart and soul grow colder
Every year;
I care no more for dancing,
Or for eyes with passion glancing,
Love is less and less entrancing
Every year.

Of the loves and sorrows blended
Every year;
Of the charms of friendship ended
Every year;
Of the ties that still might bind me,
Until Time to Death resigned me
My infirmities remind me
Every year.

Ah! how sad to look before us
Every year;
While the cloud grows darker o'er us
Every year.
When the blossoms all are faded,
That to bloom we might have aided
And immortal garlands braided
Every year.

To the past go more dead faces
Every year;
As the loved leave vacant places
Every year;
Everywhere the sad eyes meet us,
In the coming dusk they greet us,
And to come to them entreat us
Every year.

"You are growing old," they tell us
Every year;
"You are more alone," they tell us
Every year;
"You can win no new affection,
You have only recollection,
Deeper sorrow and dejection
Every year."

Yes! the shores of life are shifting
Every year;
And we are seaward drifting
Every year;
Old places changing fret us,
The living more forget us,
There are fewer to regret us
Every year.

But the truer life draws nigher
Every year;
And its morning star climbs higher
Every year;
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burden lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter
Every year.

—Albert Pike in the Courier Journal.

[The following verses were written and dedicated to Albert Pike, in reply to his "Every Year," by one of our most distinguished native statesmen—Hon. A. M. Waddell.]

Time, fly he ne'er so fleetly
Every year,
Only tunes your harp more sweetly
Every year;
And we listen to its ringing
And the minstrel, swan-like singing
More melodious numbers flinging
Every year.

Sing on, oh! grand old master,
Every year;
Pour thy mellow rhythms faster
Every year.
They will make our journey lighter
And our weary pathway brighter,
As our locks grow thin and whiter
Every year.

Yes, our loved ones go before us
Every year;
And the living more ignore us
Every year.
It is well. What need for sorrow
If the dawn of each to-morrow
Brighter tints from Heaven borrow
Every year?

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

This Man Told The Last Story.

From the New Haven News.

A party of gentlemen at a Birmingham hotel were telling stories one night recently of famous shots and how many quails, partridges, ducks and other birds had been killed at a single discharge. After listening to what seemed a willful exaggeration by different narrators, a stranger who was present volunteered his experience of his own use of the fatal double-barreled gun as follows:

"I went into the field one day to try gunning. The only game I discovered was an immense flock of blackbirds. I should say there were 10,000 in the flock. Slowly I crawled up to them, and when not more than four rods away the birds rose in a solid mass. I fired both barrels, and how many do you think I killed?"

Different guesses were made by the party, ranging from 20 to 100.

"Not one," said the stranger, "but I went out with my brother to look for results, and we picked up four bushels of legs. I had shot a little under."

This was the last story told.

Rice at the Fair.

Everybody, almost, knows what a wide-out, short-up figure Billy Rice, the minstrel, has. Well, about two weeks ago (at least, so we are informed) Billy was at an agricultural show in a one-night-stand town, and as he stood in a thouthtful attidude contemplating the exhibit, the edito: of the county paper and a farmer passed by.

"Look there," whispered the editor, "that's Rice."

"Where?" inquired the farmer.

"There," said the editor, pointing toward William.

"Rice?" repeated the farmer, inquiringly.

"Yes."

"Well, by gosh, it's the funniest rice I ever seen. It looks a blame sight more like a punkin. Le's go an' take a look at it."

Billy met the farmer half way and paralyzed him.

HOUSEHOLD RECEIPTS.

Jellied Chicken.

Boil a chicken until the meat slips easily from the bone, reducing the water to about one pint in the boiling. Pick off the meat in good sized pieces, taking out all the fat and bones. Skim the fat from the liquor, add a little butter, pepper and salt to taste, and add one-half an ounce of gelatine. When this dissolves pour it hot over the chickens. The liquor should be seasoned highly, as the chicken absorbs much of the flavor.

Bay rum is now said to be the cure for freckles; a little borax is added to the bay rum.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.

THURSDAY,.....NOVEMBER 18, 1886.

THE CUMBERLAND FAIR.

The 24th annual Fair of the Cumberland County Agricultural Society was considered the best one which has been held in many years—in some respects the best since the war. The crowd upon the grounds on Thursday was very large, and the gate receipts were highly satisfactory to the management.

The display of machinery and farming implements was quite limited, though the farmers' department proper reflected great credit on the farmers of this section. In this department were magnificent pumpkins, potatoes, collards, cabbages, turnips, beets, corn, peas, beans, rice, wheat, rye, oats, &c., &c. Indeed, so fine were the very numerous exhibits that we fear, in making special mention, we may omit to speak of something particularly meritorious, which omission one more experienced in such matters would consider unpardonable.

FIELD AND FARM PRODUCTS.

The display of Indian corn by Messrs. H. P. Davis, E. J. Edwards, W. B. Draughon, Jas. Thames, A. B. Hinshaw, L. D. Caviness, W. G. Hollingsworth, Joel C. Johnson, J. Marshall Williams, William Alderman, E. S. Saunders, and others was fine, and the perfection to which this all-important branch of agriculture has been brought in this county, as shown by the above exhibits, proves beyond doubt that ours is preeminently a farming country, and a most favored one at that.

In field peas Messrs. Thames, Alderman, Saunders, Dr. Jno. Cox and others made a most excellent show, both in varieties and quality.

Wheat, rye and oats made a splendid showing, too, notwithstanding the fact that this is not considered a section well adapted to the growing of small grain. The wheat and oats of Mr. James Thames struck us as especially meritorious, while Messrs. Saunders and Alderman had fine displayes.

Mr. Jas. Thames had beautiful samples of Cumberland county rice—both rough and cleaned. Indeed, one could hardly turn in any direction without seeing some good article exhibited by Mr. Thames. He is a most excellent farmer, and the great variety of his exhibits goes to show that he is wise, and does not believe in the cultivation of one crop to the exclusion of all others.

Potatoes, pumpkins, cabbages, ground peas, &c., were piled up in profusion, and their mammoth size and excellence was a sight good to look upon. The principal exhibitors in this department will be found mentioned in the premimum list, under the head of Farmers' Hall. Capt. W. J. Tolar's Jersey potatoes and J. D. McIver's immense turnips were much admired.

In baled forage the exhibit was specially meritorious. Messrs. N. L. Ray, A. H. Worth, James Thames, John F. Byrne, Wm. Alderman showed baled hay, fodder and shucks. Capt. S. C. Rankin had a sample of ensilage which was pronounced "all right" by competent judges.

In leaf tobacco Messrs. Raney, R. F. Devane and John Kirkpatrick had good samples. A special feature in the tobacco was the "first box of tobacco manufactured in Cumberland county from the leaf grown in said county." The manufacturing was done by Maj. R. M. Orrell from tobacco grown by Mr. John Kirkpatrick, of Rockfish.

In fruits Mr. J. S. Breece made a splendid exhibit of apples and pears. Mr. Breece also had some fine tomatoes—perfectly ripe, fresh and sound. Also, good exhibit of milo sage.

Mr. Alex. Stanton, of Clio, S. C., exhibited the finest samples of sugar cane we have ever seen.

The good, old-fashioned North Carolina bacon hams and sides looked tempting indeed. This exhibit was very fine. Messrs. James Thames, E. H. Evans, J. N. Peoples and Dr. E. Floyd were exhibitors in this line.

Farmers' hall, in fact was full of good things. Crops may have been short this year, owing to the bad seasons, but a walk through this department last week rather led one to suppose that the splendid samples of field crops and farm products were the results, not only of judicious husbandry, but a specially fine crop year. If the seasons had been favorable, what might we not have seen in farmers' hall!

CARRIAGES, HARNESS, ETC.

Messrs. Tyson & Jones, of Carthage, N. C., exhibited a very fine extension top phaeton and a tasty open buggy. This firm is doing a large business in North Carolina.

Messrs. A. A. McKethan & Son, of Fayetteville, N. C., exhibited a splendid top phaeton buggy and an open buggy. The work turned out by this old, established firm seems to improve, if that were possible, as the years go by, as was attested by the general get-up and beauty of finish of the work shown by them last week.

Mr. T. O. Whaley exhibited a set of double and a set of single harness. Mr. Whaley's work is worthy of special mention. It was all hand-made work, and while made mainly with a view to durability and strength, was of fine finish and very showy. Also, by the same, a fine riding bridle and martingales. By H. Whaley, one saddle. McKethan's buggies and Whaley's saddles are known all over the country, and when we say that they exhibited goods at the fair every one knows that they were worthy of special mention.

Messrs. Tolar & Poe had a good exhibit of their fine machine-made brick.

PANTRY AND DAIRY SUPPLIES.

Passing on to the food and condiment department, we got perfectly bewildered. There were piles and piles of golden butter, snow-white bread, rich cakes, pies, jellies, jams, preserves, syrups, pickles, wines, cordials, vinegar, etc. There were over one-half of one thousand entries in this building, so that it is not to be expected that we could give more than a passing notice of their general excellence.

Mr. H. R. Horne exhibited his Carolina Baking Powder, widely known for purity and excellence. Being a home production, we deem it worthy of special mention.

FLORAL HALL.

What can we say of Floral Hall? What, indeed, is a "male person" expected to say of crochet work, tatting, silk embroidery, fancy needle work, crazy quilts, and such like? They were beautiful, we know, because we heard the women say so, and countless little feminine "Ohs!" mingled with such expressions as "Isn't that just too lovely!" convinced us that Floral Hall was "bang up" this year, and no mistake.

Mrs. H. McD Robinson's exhibit of paintings in oil and mineral colors—landscape and placque painting—and of crayon drawings was very beautiful and meritorious. Very meritorious exhibits in landscape and placque and panel painting and crayon drawing were made by Misses Maggie Pemberton, Emma Murchison, Eugenia Williams, Janie Williams, Birdie Brady, Bertie Cole, Ila Harrington, Lou Evans, Belle Alderman, Maggie Rose, Mrs. W. F. Leak, Mrs. T. G. Hall.

Mrs. J. A. White of Oxford, exhibited a very beautiful specimen of lustro painting on a velvet banner. One of the most meritorious and best executed works was a crayon portrait of Dr B. W. Robinson by Miss Jane Tillinghast, a young lady without experience or training. The likeness is very good and the work well executed. This drawing would do credit to an experienced artist.

In embroidery work Mrs. L. Strauss made a specially fine exhibit, both in the number of articles and the excellence and beauty of her work. In this line splendid exhibits were made by Misses Alice Jones, Emma Murchison, Alice Campbell, Kate Mitchell, Alice Woodward, Lou Evans, Carrie Cohen, Mrs. N. W. Ray, Mrs. E. L. Pemberton, Mrs. W. F. Leak, Mrs. T. G. Hall, Mrs. T. H. Hunter, and perhaps others.

In crochet work and lace the most notable exhibitors were Misses Ella McIver of Sanford, Julia Newby of Sandford, Lou Evans, Mary H. Matthews, Alice Woodward (most beautiful work), Emma Woodward (greatly admired for beauty and excellence), Maggie Utley, Rosa McLean, Annie Moore, Mrs. N. W. Ray (beautiful tidy of 97 pieces), Mrs. H. P. Davis, Mrs. J. B. Broadfoot, Mrs. J. T. Carson and others.

Beautiful specimens of braid and outlining on linen by Mrs. Henry Makepeace.

Most elegant and tasteful drawn work on linen, &c., by Miss Mary V. Linebaek, Mrs. T. M. Hunter and others. Miss Kate Broadfoot, aged 6½ years, exhibited a specimen of outlining on linen which was splendidly done and reflected great credit on so young a person.

Miss Alice Woodward, a very beautiful crazy quilt, which elicited much admiration for the tasteful blending of colors and the skill evinced in the work. Miss Kate B. Smith, a very beautiful silk quilt—greatly admired.

Mrs. H. P. Davis had a very fine exhibit in embroidery, lace work, beautiful infant's dress, etc.

Mrs. J. B. Broadfoot's exhibit in lace work, embroidery and fancy work, etc., was very large and worthy of special mention.

The Ladies' Industrial Exchange had lovely specimens of fancy needle work, embroidery, plain sewing, etc.

Mrs. T. G. Hall's exhibit in Floral Hall was specially meritorious. A unique wild duck turban, a beautiful feather muff, splendid work in etching, a lovely landscape painting, a superbly dressed sheep skin—soft as velvet and white as snow, a tasteful hat and umbrella rack, were among the articles which she exhibited.

Mrs. S. F. Solms, a most beautiful what-not, made of spools and tastefully colored. The work of her own skillful hands.

Miss Eilers, of Wilmington, made a superb exhibit of hand painting on china. This work was specially meritorious and equalled that done on the finest decorated china which we see exposed for sale in the great china emporiums. The ware was gilded and fired by Miss Eilers herself.

Mrs. J. B. Smith exhibited for a little 10 years-old boy in far-away Scotland a most beautiful cork picture frame enclosing a very attractive little picture. This frame made wholly of cork, was a marvel of beauty and ingenuity, and showed how deft are the fingers of the Scotch boys in the old country.

Col. A. C. Davis, of the Davis school, exhibited a solid silver tea tray, once the property of the renowned Flora McDonald, and purchased by one of Col. Davis's ancestors more than 100 years ago at the confiscation sale of Flora McDonald's property.

One of the neatest and most useful articles we saw in Floral Hall was a fancy shuck basket made and exhibited by A. McN. Williams.

Mrs. S. W. Bunch had on exhibition most beautiful and skillfully wrought specimens of hair work.

The Acme Manufacturing Co., of Cronly, N. C., exhibited through their agents, Messrs. Brown & Roddick, specimens of excellent matting made from the fibre of the long leaf of the North Carolina pine. The thread made from this fibre is remarkably strong, and this enterprise of the Acme company bids fair to add another very important industry to the list of Southern manufactures. The medicinal qualities of the long leaf pine are very highly prized in Germany, and we are told that rheumatic patients there derive great benefit from sleeping on mattresses stuffed with this long leaf fibre, while physicians successfully treat catarrh patients by making them inhale a very fine powder made from this same fibre. Thus our readers can judge of the great field which lies before the Acme company in this, the only successful manipulation of our "old familiar" long leaf.

But space does not permit of our longer dwelling on the useful, beautiful and varied display in Floral Hall. It was so profuse that we must close by referring our readers to the list of exhibitors in the premium list.

Mr. J. M. Lamb's display of growing plants from Sunnyside Nursery was, as usual, superb.

LIVE STOCK.

The live stock department was very full, and the cattle, swine, sheep, etc., were much finer than are usually seen at a county fair. Mr. W. G. Upchurch had a splendid Jersey bull; Capt. J. S. Evans, splendid Devon bull; Capt. J. B. Broadfoot, fine Jersey cattle; Mr. G. P. McNeill, the same; E. S. Saunders, the same; E. H. Evans, fine native cattle; W. J. McDonald, Jr., the same; C. D. Nixon, fine Devon and other cattle. In sheep Capt. J. B. Broadfoot and Mr. E. H. Evans made good displays. In swine Messrs. Hinshaw, Sellars, Broadfoot, and Williams took the lead. In horses, mules, etc., Messrs. J. W. Tomlinson, A. B. Hinshaw, H. H. Bolton, W. W. Huske, E. S. Saunders and T. S. Memory made specially meritorious exhibits.

For other exhibitors of live stock see premium list.

POULTRY.

In this department there were many fine specimens of all kinds of chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese, guineas, peafowls, etc. For names of exhibitors and other information we refer to premium list.

COL. HOLT'S ADDRESS.

The annual address, delivered by Col. Thos. M. Holt, of Alamance, on Thursday, was highly spoken of by all who had the good fortune to hear it. Col. Holt is truly a representative man, and as such his speech was listened to with added interest by the large audience. We are glad to know that Col. Holt was delighted with his visit to Fayetteville, and spoke in high praise of our town and her hospitable citizens.

The racing was good, and much interest was excited in the different trials of speed. Mr. J. S. Hall's horse, Jack Frost, won a trotting race on Friday; time, we believe, 2:38. Mr. H. P. Davis's 3½ years-old colt, Zilpah Maine, won several races. Zilpah is a fine animal, and would, with proper training, build up a splendid record. Blue Jay, Capt. J. S. Evans and Joe Bailey, E. H. Evans, both won races also.

THE CADETS.

The cadets were one of the features of the Fair. Their fine drilling was witnessed by great numbers of people, and the music rendered by their band added much to the enjoyment of the stay on the Fair grounds. We give an article on the Davis school in another column.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The order observed on the grounds during the whole time of the Fair was very good; no fighting nor riotous behavior.

The Fair was a grand success. We have been almost enthusiastic in our praise of it, but we feel certain that its officers are entitled to more eradit than our pen is able to give them. President J. B. Broadfoot, Treasurer A. A. McKethan and Secretary G. W. Lawrence, with the whole of the Executive Committee, labored zealously to make the 24th annual Fair what it should be, and the sucecesssul result of their efforts must indeed be gratifying to them.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN DURHAM.

A very disastrous fire occurred at Durham, N. C., at about 3 o'clock A. M., Tuesday, 15th inst. We clip the following condensed account from letters of Messrs. Carr and Kramer in the Raleigh Evening Visitor of the 16th: Mr. Carr says: Fire broke out this morning shortly after 3 o'clock, in Atwater's store. Seventeen of our best buildings were burned, including Parrish's warehouse, the bank of Durham, Parrish's two large prize rooms, four stories each, and Umpstead's four story warehouse, besides twelve stores, including the postoffice and the office of the Tobacco Plant. Also the residence of I. Ed Lyon.

The loss of tobacco was all of 1,000,000 pounds. There were 700 hogsheads of tobacco burned in the basement of Parrish's warehouse alone, besides large quantities in the three other warehouses, prized in hogsheads and in bulk.

Mr. Kramer says: Thirteen stores were totally destroyed, and seven badly damaged. The stores are all of brick. One and a half million pounds of tobacco are in smoke, valued at $200,000. Total loss $400,000; insurance, $250,000. A force of laborers are already among the hot bricks. Contracts for rebuilding six stores have been already consummated.

We regret to state that Mr. C. C. Taylor, one of our Fayetteville boys, was among the sufferers by the fire.

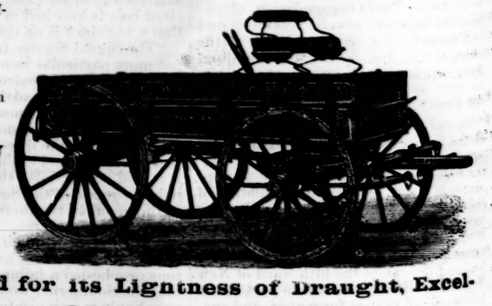
"THE BEST WAGON ON WHEELS."

Such is our opinion after a LONG EXPERIENCE IN WAGONS,

And also the opinion of all who use the

Old Hickory FARM and ROAD WAGON.



Unsurpassed for its Lightness of Draught, Excellence of Finish and Durability.

It is to your interest to buy an Old Hickory Wagon, because they will stand up under MORE WEIGHT and RUN LIGHTER than the corresponding size of any other wagon manufactured. They are the BEST IRONED wagons in the market; you will never be annoyed by having the tires become loose. During the long-protracted droughts of 1851 and 1884, the Company did not have one single complaint of loose tires, nor have they since. There never has been a case of a loose box in a wheel of an Old Hickory Wagon. Forty thousand of these wagons are now in use throughout the United States, giving perfect satisfaction in all cases. They are sold under a WRITTEN GUARANTEE not to be defective in material or workmanship, and should any defect show itself within TWELVE MONTHS, it will be made good free of cost.

☞ Examine the Old Hickory Wagons and Carts before you buy. PRICES LOW.

Notice of Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Union Home Hospital society on Thursday, Dec. 2, 4 p. m. A full attendance is requested by the Secretary. Miss Harriet Haigh.

"Gone far across the Sea."

Miss J. B. Smith is at home again from her visit to Scotland. She reports her visit to the country as a very pleasant one. The trip across the water was made in the fine steamer City of Georgia, Capt. Moody, of the State Line. Time in crossing—11 days.

Premium List.

We give to our readers to-day the premium list with the exception of the premiums on crops, to be awarded by certificates, a few discretionary and special premiums. These premiums will be awarded at a meeting of the Executive Committee on Tuesday next, and will appear in our issue of the 25th inst.

Engines for the C. F. & Y. V.

The C. F. & Y. V. Railway company have received two new locomotives. They are both ten-wheel engines with cylinders 19 x 24 and weigh 48 tons each. They have air brake attachments, and were built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works. They go down on the list as Nos. 12 and 13.

Manufactured Tobacco.

True to his purpose, Maj R. M. Orrell manufactured on last week a box of "plug" and exhibited it at the Fair. The leaf was grown by Mr. John Kirkpatrick. May this one box be the forerunner of many, and the Major's enterprise be successful beyond his most sanguine expectations, is the wish of the OBSERVER AND GAZETTE.

Oxford Orphans.

We are requested to give notice that a class of the Oxford orphans will give an entertainment in this town to-morrow (Friday) evening. The hour and place at which the entertainment will be held will be given here-after. We bespeak for them a liberal patronage.

The Band Contest.

The band contest at the Fair last week between Shoe Heel band carried off the prize—$80 cash. Three bands entered—the Shoe Heel, Fayetteville and Davis. Each band played three selections. The music was most excellent, and it seemed to us that the committee had a delicate question to decide. Mr. Max Novitzky, of Fayetteville, and Prof. Hosiak, of Salem, were the judges. We congratulate the Shoe Heel band.

WEATHER SIGNALS.

The following is an explanation of the weather service signals as daily displayed from the flag-pole on Rose & Leak's store:

White Flag.—Fair weather or clear.
Yellow Flag.—Local rain or snow.
Blue Flag.—General rain or snow.
Black Triangular Flag.—Temperature signal. This, when above another flag, means that the temperature is expected to rise; below, that it is expected to fall. When not displayed, the temperature is expected to be stationary—all compared with the day previous.
White Flag with black square in centre.—Cold wave signal. This signal indicates decidedly cold weather, and is only ordered when the temperature is expected to fall suddenly 20° or more and to reach 45° F. or lower.

The Cadets at Our Fair.

The Davis Cadets were without doubt a great feature of the Fair last week. They were admired by all for their gentlemanly behavior, fine appearance and excellent drilling. Old soldiers, on all sides, complimented the drill, and we understand that Judge Gilmer, who is an old soldier himself, said it was very fine. The dress parade on Friday was greatly enjoyed by the large crowd of spectators.

The Davis school is the only school in the State which has a cornet band, and the Davis band certainly make good music.

The battalion at our Fair last week, as we have before stated, contained 150 men in ranks and was divided into four companies, under command of Col. A. C. Davis, the Superintendent of the school.

One good feature of a military school is that it makes boys self-reliant and teaches them the necessity of helping themselves and relying on their own exertions in the battle of life. From all appearances we should say the Davis school possessed this feature in a marked degree. Without that forward pertness which is too often seen in school-boys the Cadets were self-possessed, mannish little fellows, and seemed to be perfectly capable of taking care of themselves. This is evidently the work of good, wholesome discipline.

It gives us great pleasure to say that during their stay here of three days, we saw not the slightest indication of indulgence in intoxicating liquors by any of the Cadets. This is saying a great deal for such a large number of boys, especially when the occasion and surrounding circumstances are taken into consideration, and this one fact should go a long way toward recommending the Davis school to parents and guardians.

The location of the Davis School, La Grange, N. C., is one of the healthiest in the State. The Principal says he has never had a death in the school and only one case of serious illness, and that was a case of pneumonia. The engravings we have seen of the buildings and grounds show this school to be admirably equipped. Col. Davis has a printing office of his own, and from specimens we have seen of the work turned out we should judge it to be a complete one.

The Dances of Last Week.

The two dances held last week, though not so largely attended as some that have been held during past Fairs, were enjoyable, and brilliant in their sparkling array of radiant beauty and manliness. The German on Wednesday night, of which former mention has been made, was one of about 36 couples, and the young people were happy, as they always are when engaging in this their favorite, the most beautiful of all dances. It was conducted by Messrs. C. L. Campbell and H. G. Myrover, of Fayetteville.

The Fair ball on Friday night was given under the auspices of the F. I. L. I. Co., and it is needless to say that any entertainment under the management of this excellent corps is bound to be a success. The young ladies as usual were divine, and from the sparkling faces of some of the participants we think that not a few young fellows that night improved the golden opportunity to whisper those sweet words that have been repeated for countless ages, but which gain added beauty with each repetition. Dancing was continued until about 3 o'clock A. M. Among the charming strangers attendant on these occasions were Mrs Robbins of Beaver Creek, Mrs Bruce Wright of Haw River; Miss Fannie Hardin, of Norfolk; Miss Mattie Fuller, of Raleigh; Miss Mary Dodson, of Greensboro; Miss Sarah Lippitt, of Wilmington; Miss Jennie Hill and Miss Annie Hicks, of Faison; Miss Frankie Faison, of Little River; Miss Murchison, of Jonesboro; and Miss Carrie Watts, of Charlotte.

The New Hotel.

The plan of the new Fayetteville Hotel can be seen in one of Mr. F. W. Thornton's show windows, and a very handsome plan it is. The building will front 152 feet on Hay street and 90 feet on Donaldson street; it will be four stories high, with a showy Mansard roof. A tower, on the northeast corner, will ornament the structure and give it a very imposing appearance. The office, in the centre of the building and fronting 52 feet on Hay street, will be built in a recess. The first story on Hay street will contain four handsome iron and glass front stores, two on each side of the main office and ladies' entrances.

The stockholders, Messrs. F. W. Thornton, J. B. Starr and A. B. Williams will at once rapidly push the work of construction. Fayetteville, on the completion of this fine hotel, will have ample hotel accommodations—the Overbaugh House, the Cumberland House, Martin's Hotel and the Fayetteville Hotel—and strangers may have no fears about comfortable quarters during large public gatherings.

Accident on the W. N. C. R. R.

Mr. W. C. Troy informs us that a serious accident, caused by the spreading of the track while the train was rounding a curve, occurred on the 6th inst., on the Murphy division of the W. N. C. R. R. Capt. Wm. B. Troy and his sister, Miss Etta, were injured—Miss Etta, we regret to say, being badly cut about the head and face. Many other passengers, among them Dr. Patton, member-elect to the Legislature from Cherokee county, were hurt.

LOCAL TWINKLINGS.

Mrs. John Small is visiting friends in Fayetteville.

We regret to learn that Mr. John McDuffie, of 7 1st, lost his barn by fire. Loss about $400. No insurance.

Mr. T. C. Oakman is visiting our town. We are pleased to see Mr. Oakman looking so well. Mountain breezes seem to agree with him.

Mr. W. C. Troy, one of Fayetteville's former prominent citizens, is in town. Mr. Troy lives in Cherokee county:—Cherokee went Democratic this year for the first time.

There is nothing like adaptability to circumstances. During the heated term Pemberton & Prior's arctic soda fount cooled a fellow with milk shakes, limeade and iced chocholate. And now, lo! the cold wave signal is flying and "Col. Jack" is dispensing hot coffee and chocholate from the identical arctic fount. And they are as palatable, too, as the cold drinks were in their season.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

NORTH CAROLINA—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Believing that God Almighty is the source of all power and authority in civil government, and recognizing Him in the person of His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, as the Saviour of mankind and the Giver of every good and perfect gift, I, Alfred M. Scales, Governor of North Carolina, by virtue of the authority in me vested by law, do appoint Thursday, the 25th day of November, as a day of special thanksgiving to Almighty God for the large share of mercies and blessings vouchsafed to us in the past year, and of devout prayer that He will continue to us His guardianship and tender care for all time to come. And I respectfully urge upon all, in accordance with an honored custom of our people, to remember liberally on that day the helpless orphans that we have taken under our charge.

Done at our city of Raleigh, this the 6th day of November, 1886, and in the one hundred and eleventh year of our American Independence.

By the Governor: ALFRED M. SCALES.
C. H. ARMFIELD, Private Secretary.

Tidal Wave at Nice, France.

LISBON, Nov. 12, 1886.—A shock of earthquake was experienced in the province of Beira yesterday. Much alarm is felt in Lisbon in consequence.

PARIS, Nov. 12—The city of Nice has been visited by enormous waves from the Mediterranean. The water swept away quays and the promenade Anglaise plantation. Upwards of 100 people were carried off their feet, and the quays and promenade are covered with sand. The devastation wrought by the waves extends two miles along the Nice water front. At Cannes, twenty-two miles from Nice, a fierce storm has been raging, and two vessels are known to have been wrecked. Men standing on the quays were carried out to sea on the immense waves. The Croisette promenade was destroyed. Rain, amounting almost to a deluge, has been falling four days at the city of Aix. The city is so badly flooded that travel in the streets is impossible except by boats. In Nismes two parishes are under water and a third is isolated by the flood.

MARRIED.

HOBBS—SPENCE.—On the night of Nov. 11th inst., at the residence of Mr. A. J. Hollingsworth in Cumberland County, N. C., by the Rev. E. J. Edwards, Mr. FRANK H. HOBBS, of Sampson county, and Miss IDA SPENCE, of Cumberland. The bridal presents were numerous, beautiful and useful.

OLD RELIABLE,

Informs his innumerable patrons of the last
TWENTY YEARS.
that he has again come to the front in the line for the Fall and Winter season, and having received the agency for the sale of Oysters from the largest Oyster packing house in the city of Norfolk, is now prepared to furnish from Norfolk the delightfully flavored Chesapeake Bay Oyster by the quart or gallon. Standing orders from hotels, restaurants and families for two gallons or more, furnished at Norfolk prices and express charges, at his grocery, No. 47 Person Street.
OYSTER

Attention is Called to Some of the Peculiarities of the Succulent Bilvalve—How Best to Eat Him.

CHAPTER II.

The Oyster has a literature as well as a fleet, a family history as well as a record. It is an aristocrat with democratic sympathies. It sits upon its throne under the salt sea waves, and countless millions of the microscopic inhabitants of the deep minister to its needs. Its food is brought to it. It takes every thing that is brought to it, proving its democratic sympathies. It never takes thought of the morrow, as to what it shall eat and what it shall drink. It has no fear of the wolf at the door. For a brief, brilliant season in its early youth, when the flush upon its sky is rosy hued, so to speak, it is a gay and festive wanderer. It swims around in all the rapt and reckless enjoyment of youthful existence. Ere it has time to repent its waywardness or to say with its ardent admirers, the wandering poets of humanity,

"Youth was my friend,
But youth has fled."

it quickly ceases its wanderings and settles down to a long and quiet enjoyment of life, undisturbed by a single care. Its swimming days are only a few hours long. It has a house built for it without money and without price. Yea, without effort or dealings with the real estate men. Nature is kind to the Oyster. It builds it a house and provides its food and drink. As it never goes abroad and receives no visitors, it needs and wears no clothes. The Oyster never bothers its brain about the latest style in bonnets or neckties.

THE FARMER'S COLUMN.

Ensilage Experiments.

A preliminary paper on the results of ensilage experiments at Rothamsted in the season of 1885-6, is contributed by Sir John Lawes to the Agricultural Gazette. A silo was filled with eighty tons of first-crop red clover and forty-eight tons of second crop red clover. The first crop was very succulent indeed, and contained when put into the silo as little as 17 per cent of dry matter, and therefore as much as 83 per cent of water. The second crop was much less watery, and contained 25 per cent of dry matter and only 75 per cent of water when put in. Of the eighty tons of first crop put in only forty tons were weighed out as silage, thus making a loss of thirty-four tons by draining, fermentation and evaporation. This loss includes fourteen tons of the actual dry matter of the eighty tons of clover, or nearly 28 per cent. of the total dry matter—an enormous loss of food constituents. The greater part of this loss falls upon the carbon-hydrates in the fodder, but nearly one-third of the nitrogenous matter has also disappeared, and about one-third of the mineral constituents. At first sight this appears somewhat appalling, and might prompt the farmer to forthwith abandon any notion of ensiling—at any rate his clover—but on inquiry into the further details of the experiment it is learned that a good deal, if not the chief part, of this loss is to be attributed to drainage—for there was a crack near the bottom of the silo and through this crack nearly two tons of juice were squeezed into an empty silo next door. Indeed, the fact that the mineral matter as well as the organic matter became reduced, would in itself suffice to indicate that the loss by drainage must have been very great. Now the forty-eight tons of second crop clover lost nothing like this proportion: The total of substance was less than three tons, of barely 6 per cent., and of this more than two tons—or more nearly 5 per cent—consisted of water; that the loss of actual dry matter or feeding material was but about a quarter of a ton, or a little over one-half per cent. of the fresh fodder, or about 2 per cent. of the actual dry matter originally present. The great difference in these two batches of silage made in the same pit is attributed by Sir John to two causes. In the first place the first crop was far more succulent or watery (as already shown) than was the second crop, while, in the second place, the pressure applied to the more watery crop in the silo was greater. For while the silage from the first crop was found to weigh only thirty-five pounds per cubic foot, that from the second crop was found to weigh only thirty-three pounds per cubic foot. The conclusion suggested is that it would certainly appear advisable either to diminish the pressure applied to the silage or to cart the crops in a less succulent condition.

Management of Breeding Sows.

No branch of the subject is of more importance than the management of breeding sows. After being served they should have plenty of exercise in roomy yard or paddock; they should be fed with a little bran or pollard mixed with slops or wash from the house; in summer they should have food—grass tares or prickley comfrey I may mention that well-fed pigs, getting up for show, are exceedingly fond of comfrey—it is first rate food for any kind of pig. It grows luxuriantly, and yields a constant supply throughout the summer. In winter, breeding sows should have a few wurzel or turnips; but as they get near to farrowing any green food must be given sparingly, particularly if the roots are at all frozen; and if frozen much they should not be given at all. When within three weeks of farrowing, with a view to the secretion of milk, the wash of food should be improved by the addition of a little bran or shorts, and a little oat meal may be added with advantage. It is desirable that the food should not be changed immediately before or after farrowing. When within a week or ten days of farrowing the sow should be put into the sty in which she is intended to farrow, so that she may become accustomed to the place. The feeder should in all cases be with her when farrowing and not a stranger, for the voice or manner is at once detected, and often unsettles a sow, which frequently results in loss. Very little straw should be given within a week of farrowing, and that quite short. I do not recommend chaff or cut straw, as some breeders do—I have found it a hindrance to the young during the first day or two, through sticking to their eyes and noses, whilst straw which has been trampled by the sows for a few days is both soft and warm, and presents no obstacle to the young pigs readily finding the teats. Numbers of pigs are lost through bedding with long straw just before the sow farrows. The indications of farrowing are very apparent—the teats fill with milk, the bearing or uterus presents a swollen and red appearance, hollows appear on either side of the tail, caused by the loosening or parting of the bones on either side of the womb passage; the sow also collects all available litter into a heap, called "making their bed;" many sows refuse their food, and the appetite of all diminishes. Pigs, of all animals, require the least help during parturition, and the wisest course is to leave them to themselves. As soon as the sow has farrowed and the afterbirth has come away, give (if cold weather) a little chilled food, but feed sparingly for the first two days, adding to the food, after the first day, a little opening or purging medicine—say two ounces of salts and two ounces flour of sulphur. This dose, while in nowise endangering a change in the milk, will keep the bowels open—a very necessary condition at this period.

Overfeeding Horses.

Horses, especially those hard at work, suffer much more from overfeeding than from almost any other cause. They may not eat too much; in fact, overfeeding is often a cause for a horse not to eat enough. It is much easier to put too much hay or grain before a horse and let him eat what he will and muss and soil the remainder, than it is to give just the right amount and see that it is eaten cleanly. No animal is more delicate in its food than a horse. If the manger is half filled with some hay or other food the odor from this takes away his appetite for what is freshly placed before him. Disregard of this fact is one reason why horses often grow poor on cut feed moistened and fed to them in warm weather. It sours very quickly at this season, and a very little left in the feed box will soon destroy a horse's appetite.

Upland Corn.

Mr. E. M. Bankhead of Bullock's Creek, raised 350 bushels of corn on ten acres of upland, six acres of which is new ground and four acres has been in cultivation three years. This is an average of thirty-five bushels to the acre, and while a satisfactory yield, shows conclusively what can be accomplished on York soil when the proper effort is made. Mr. Bankhead has shown us specimen ears of his corn, one of which is eleven inches long.

General and Special Premiums.

The following general and special premiums for Department A., Field Crops, have been offered for the next Annual Fair of the Cumberland County Agricultural Society—the former, by the Association, the latter, by the business men of Fayetteville:

LAND SALE.

Unless sooner disposed of privately, I will on Tuesday, November 30th, 1886, at 12 o'clock M. sell at public auction to the highest bidder, at the Market House in Fayetteville, the following real estate, viz:

1st: My residence on Green Street in Fayetteville, opposite the Episcopal Church. This property is so well known that a more particular description of it is not deemed necessary. Such an opportunity to purchase one of the most desirable residences in Fayetteville, centrally and conveniently located, may not be presented again in a long time. Nothing except a combination of circumstances which, notwithstanding many sincere regrets, moves me to change my residence, could induce me to part with this property at any price. But now it must go, at whatever sacrifice.

2nd: Also the new six-room tenement house adjoining, fronting on Mason Street, and occupied by my tenant, H. I. McDuffie.

3rd: Also the stable lot adjoining, fronting on Mason Street.

4th: Also the Southerland or Jessup house, corner Orange and Chauncy Streets, now occupied by my tenant, Hector Murchison.

5th: Also four building lots fronting on Orange Street, and four building lots fronting on Frink Street—all part of the Southerland or Jessup property, in desirable locality, near the "Short Cut" R. R.

6th: Also the "Cicero Bell place" on Carver's Creek, near George McKay's, on the public road leading from Fayetteville to Kingsbury—containing 136 acres.

7th: Also the "Millander place" of 87 acres, near Kingsbury, and about 250 acres of the "Smoky Tavern" track.

8th: Also the "Silas Capel" place of 50 acres, on McDuffie's Creek and Puppy Creek, in 71st Township.

Terms: One-half cash, balance in four equal instalments on 3, 6, 9 and 12 months' credit, with interest at 8 per cent. from date of sale.
